JANUARY SALE

Bought your pillows & comforters elsewhere? Guaranteed you overpaid!!!

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Hamptons Shortage

If We Can't Lower The Summer Crowds, Maybe We Could Raise The Number Of Hamptons

By Dan Rattiner

This past summer, things got so crowded in the Hamptons, I began to think of ways we could prevent people from coming here. The more I thought about it, though, the more I realized that we could not do this. This is America. You can't prevent people from going wherever they want.

Then I thought, well, maybe I ought to turn this idea upside down. If we couldn't have fewer people, perhaps we could have more Hamptons. I wrote an article about it, suggesting we have at least two more, perhaps in the pine barrens between Quogue and Riverhead. We could have more stores to shop in, more parking spaces, more restaurants to eat at. Currently, as everybody knows, it is practically impossible to find a parking space in our downtowns in the summer-time. As for restaurants, you have to make reservations far in advance. People have gotten terminal illnesses and, on their death beds given the dates and times to their nearest and dearest.

"August 27, 8 pm, Nick & Toni's, party of six, in my name," are typical last words.

Quite a bit came from the publishing of this article. It was written about in a Neil Travis column in the New York Post. It was discussed, I heard later, at a Town Board meeting.

There was, however, a boomerang effect. The East Hampton Village Board, after considering the shortage of commercial facilities, announced that any expansion would not be in their backyard. They were proposing that no stores larger than 10,000 square feet be considered. And there would be no chain-stores. Then they received a real, actual Hamptons, or anyway, variations on the theme of the Hamptons. Something with a Main Street, two rows of stores, two rows of elm trees, a town pond or town green, two white swans, an old windmill from the seventeenth century, a village hall, a museum and at least one sixty foot high white church. There would be wooden park benches on Main Street, a secondary street with a name like Hildreth or Howell Lane, brick sidewalks, picket fences and for lighting, converted gas lamps. There should also be a library where you could obtain memorabilia from the Revolutionary War days, books about the history of the town, including whaling, Indians, maybe the biography of some famous locally grown nineteenth century preachers. Surely somebody famous, like Aaron Burr, had been born there.

Now, where shall we put them? First of all, I have found that, quite astonishingly, the existing Hamptons don't take up much space. They are all jam packed together, the stores, all built three hundred and fifty years ago when everyone was on foot. The commercial district of Southampton, for example, is less than a half mile by a half mile. Bridgehampton is half that. The entire downtown report from a firm they hired saying they had 1,455 parking spaces in downtown, but what they needed was 2,944. How about that?

Under these circumstances, the idea of two or three new Hamptons makes quite a bit of sense. The question is where? The time has come to take the next step.

Before I tell you where, however, I would like to run by you some definitions. I am not talking about two new shopping centers with the stores facing out on a sea of parking. I am talking about

NEW YORK'S MOST CELEBRATED SYNAGOGUE

South O' the Highway (and North, too)

Southampton resident Marty Richards is busy at work this season, planning The Seventh Annual Red Ball. The event takes place on Valentine's Day, February 14, in the Grand Ballroom of the Waldorf Astoria. Marty is one of the Honorary Chairs of the event, along with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cronkite, and they will join over 500 New Yorkers, Hamptonites and their Valentines on the most romantic evening of the year. The Red Ball, which this year honors Clive Davis and Elaine and Jerry Orbach, was established by Marty Richards seven years ago as a loving tribute to his late wife. Guests attending this exciting and sophisticated black-tie event will be treated to an evening of roses, dancing and the stirring sounds of the Mark Stevens Starlight Orchestra. Proceeds benefit the Mary Lea Johnson Richards Institute at New York University and The Children's Advocacy Center of Manhattan. For tix call 212-753-3999.

Ann Curry, co-host with Katie Couric, Matt Lauer and Al Roker of NBC's Today Show will serve as Honorary Chairperson, along with Giancarlo Esposito, for the big Literacy Volunteers of America benefit, scheduled for July 28, 2001, at the magnificent Woods Lane estate of Mary Ellen Kay, Sr. V.P. at Prudential Securities.

The 2nd Annual Pony Awards benefit for Maryhaven will be held on Saturday, June 9, with Muriel Siebert, the "first woman of Wall Street," serving as the honoree. Dan Rattiner, (last year's recipient) and Cathy Squires will serve as Event Chairs. The Pony Awards benefit was dubbed by all attendees as the best event of Summer 2000! For information and sponsorship opportunities call Linda Shapiro at 329-5480.

Just this week Dan's Fashion Editor Maria Tennariello was on a live telephone interview with Sudsy of Sudsy Sez, along with Mrs. Sudsy on their daily radio show on WLNG. Ms. Tennariello talked about her "Shop 'Til You Drop" and "Luxuries" column. Not only that, but the exchange was being filmed by NBC's Dateline. Shortage (Continued from page 9) of Sag Harbor could fit onto the front lawn of the Villa Maria Convent in Water Mill (Although that would not necessarily be a good idea.) You really do not need a whole lot of open space. It's amazing nobody has noticed this before.

I have scouted around. One of the best spots for a Hamptons is on Scuttlehole Road between Butter and Lumber Lanes. Currently it is all potato fields. Millstone Road comes in here. That's where you'd put a traffic light. Also the obligatory wooden windmill, on a small green in the middle of the street. The stores could spill up Millstone a ways, maybe trickle down Butter and Lumber. It would be as big as Southampton. A lot bigger than Bridgehampton.

Another good spot for a village, I think, is along the banks of Northwest Harbor in East Hampton. You'd have the stores along Northwest Landing Road. And then you'd have to build a new road, right along the Harborfront real pretty like, with the stores on the side of the street away from the water, looking out at the water. You'd call this Harbor Street, and you'd have sailboats and small outboard fishing boats and rowboats backing right up to Harbor Street. There's very little draft in Northwest Harbor which is why it never developed as a commercial area back when there was a lot of import-export going on in these parts, but now, for a couple of clothing stores, a grocery store, half a dozen restaurants, two souvenir shops and three or four antique shops, and with parking in back of the stores, it would be a godsend.

I thought for a while it might be a good idea to have a Hamptons right smack on the oceanfront, but the truth is there would be no historical basis for it. The Indians and the settlers thought it was crazy to build down by the ocean, what with the smells, the flooding, the exposure to storms, the unpredictable erosion and the complete inability to safely dock a boat. It was just a thought I briefly had.

Other places to build some new Hamptons would include North Magee Street and White's Lane in Tuckahoe, Red Creek Road between Old Squire Road and Newtown Road in Hampton Bays, the intersection of Lewis Road and Griffing Road in Westhampton and Old Country Road between Northway and Tuthill in Eastport. Look 'em up.

I also thought a nice Hampton could go in the triangle made by Upper Seven Ponds Road, Lower Seven Ponds Road and Head of Pond Road, just because I liked the names of these streets. You'd put the windmill at the corner of Lower Seven Ponds and Head of Pond because it would command a view of Deerfield Pond just fifty feet away, and you'd have the stores run shoulder to shoulder on both sides of Lower Seven Ponds until you got to the War Memorial Obelisk on a triangle where Upper Seven Ponds, Lower Seven Ponds and Seven Ponds Towd Road come together just two hundred yards away.

Stop by the office. I'll show you the site plans. •

NEW ITEMS THAT TALK TO YOU.....

General Printing

The Commander In Chief Of My Printer Barks His Orders Over The Loudspeaker

By Dan Rattiner

I have bought the most extraordinary computer printer. It talks. It tells you when you are out of paper. It tells you the ink cartridge is low. And it tells you all of this in a voice of a General in the Army. Or a Commander at West Point.

PRIN-ting STAR-ted! it says in a deep, authoritative voice when the printer starts printing. In fact, it says this about a second before the printer starts printing, and it says it as a command, after which, immediately, Private Printer commences to follow the order.

PRIN-ting com-LETE, it says at the end. I listened for what I expected would surely be one more command after that, but it never came. AT-EASE, is what I expected.

This printer is a $59 LexMark Z11 color printer, that I bought during a forty percent off sale at some computer store. There was also a $50 rebate you could mail in. So I think I made money buying this printer. In fact, I bought two of them. Have one at home, one at the office. Raking in the money.

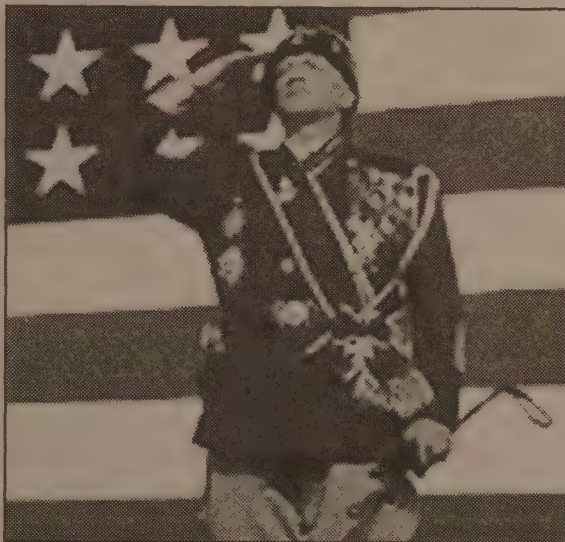

TIME to re-PLACE the color INK cartridge! it says when you are about to run out of ink.

Lief Neubauer, who runs the Dan's Papers internet site at the office set me up with the talking printer. He showed me how to do it at home by myself, too. Actually, the talking part comes on a CD which you have to install on your computer. It's the speakers in the computer that do the talking. But it's the LexMark Printer CD that tells them what to say and in what voice to say it.

The PA-per tray is EMPTY!

"Will you turn that damn thing off," my significant other said sweetly the other day. Lief showed me how to turn it off, too.

I don't think I have ever heard any device speak with such authority as this LexMark Printer. It stops all conversation cold. The people at LexMark who designed this had to KNOW it would stop all conversation cold. And so I suspect they created this voice as satire. It reminds me of nothing so much as Buzz Lightyear or that character in the Muppets known as Sam the Eagle. Or George C. Scott playing Patton. Is this any way to run a

-$12 printer? You bet it is.

Up until this time, my favorite voice has always been the one for Bell Atlantic. It says WELCOME TO BELL ATLANTIC and for a long time, since Bell Atlantic came into business about the time of the Gulf War, I thought the voice was that of Colin Powell. It sure sounded like him. In recent years, though, I have come to learn that this voice is that of the actor James Earl Jones, who sometimes plays Colin Powell, or some other very sure-of-himself General. But that voice — and I know he speaks for Verizon now, which is the new name for Bell Atlantic, but it is not the same — is tough and powerful but also protective and reassuring. One could run for President with that voice. With General Patton's voice, one could, disobeying orders, get the LexMark to fire a nuclear weapon to save the country thereby destroying it. It's the most re-actionary thing imaginable. Thank God all it's in charge of is a printer.

Before James Earl Jones, my favorite voice was the very irritated male voice that would come on the payphone when you failed to come up with a nickel for overtime. It would say, in a monotone, PLEASE DEPOSIT FIVE CENTS OR YOUR CALL WILL BE TERMINATED. This was the voice of a drone. He would do it. Absolutely. And with no nickel forthcoming, he did. I came to refer to him, jokingly to whoever I was talking to, as "The Terminator." Ha ha. Sometimes, they heard me.

Another of my favorites is a small fourteen story commercial building in Manhattan into which they installed a new elevator back in about 1985. It is a talking elevator and it calls out the floors. But it is so old and in need of repair — at least the voice part anyway — that what comes out is mush. I figure the talking part was way ahead of its time, the manufacturer went out of business and there are no replacement parts, but that's my guess.

RAOUL GFRMPGE it says when it stops on the twelfth floor. HONKA BRUUDESH WOFA BEELEEAHTA it says when it arrives on the ground floor. Everybody steps out. This is at 242 West 30th Street. Go in and check it out.

But hurry. Some day, it will stop at a floor and just moan for a long, long time and then somebody — probably somebody who has been coming to his office in the building every day for fifteen years — will shoot it with a pistol. And that will be the end of it.

Some of my other favorites are the 800 number for American Airlines, which features a lady so smug you can hardly stand it. She tells you the various options you can press, but underlying it what she is really saying is that American Airlines is just so good that it most certainly is the best airline ever and she is so lucky to be working there and you are just so lucky to have called it. And of course whatever it is you are calling about will be absolutely taken care of promptly if you will just hang on patiently until customer service representatives finish waiting on other customers who called ahead of you.

* * *

So on the LexMark I got a new ink cartridge, took out the old one, and put in the new one. And neither Leif nor I, clicking all sorts of buttons on the computer screen, have been able to figure out how to reset the voice so it no longer says, every time you print,

Time to re-PLACE the color INK CAR-tridge! It's full, dammit. Don't you Get It? But he just goes onward and upward, wrong every single time. It's enough to make you lose faith in Colin Powell. •

Informant In Labrador Case Arrested In Tortula

A premier witness for the prosecution in the case of William Labrador, the son of Southampton Town Zoning Board of Appeals Chairwoman Barbara Labrador, has been arrested in Tortula and charged with fraud and deception, casting a dubious light on his claim that Labrador had confessed his crime to him.

Mr Labrador and three friends have been in jail in Tortula for a year on the charge they murdered artist Lois McMillen. Eyewitnesses said the artist was last seen in the company of the defendants.

Jeff Plante, who had been on parole from a felony conviction in Texas, said at a hearing in August that Labrador had confessed to the murder when they were both in jail in Tortula. Since then Plante has been arrested for passing a bad check and twenty-seven counts of "receiving property or services through deception," such as accruing large bills with merchants and making no attempt to pay them.

Barbara Labrador says this shows the character of Plante, and that he gave damaging testimony to her son in a deal with the government in order to keep from being extradited to Texas, where he is wanted for breaking parole. He had served ten years of a forty-five year sentence. If he is sent back to Texas he could possibly serve out the additional thirty-five years of his sentence. •

Suing The Ducks

Lawsuit Commences About An Incident At A Baseball Game On The East End

By Dan Rattiner

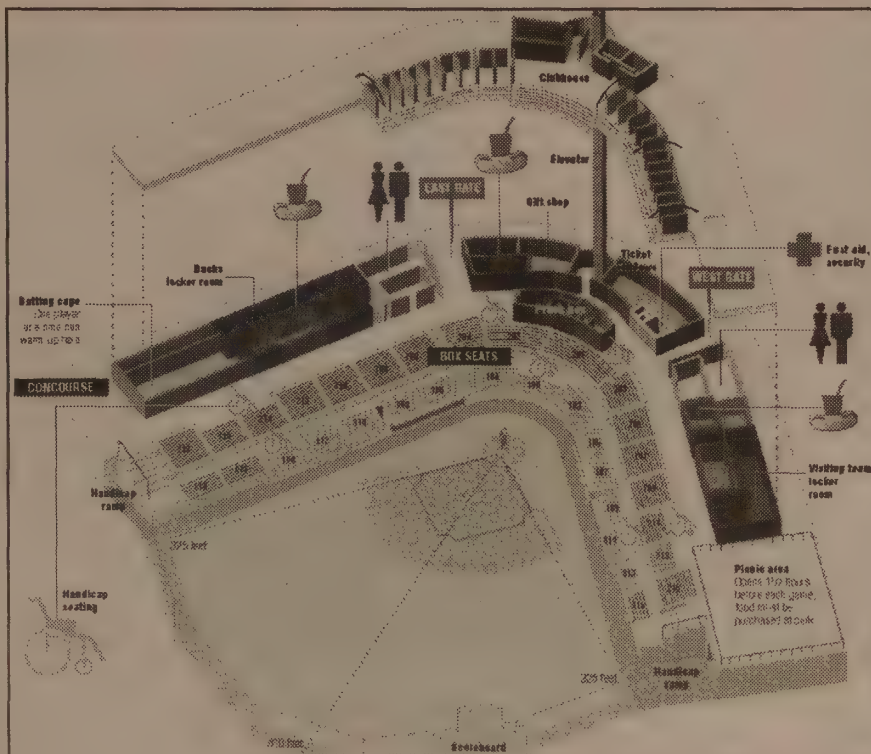

Did you know that eastern Long Island has its own professional baseball team? Well they do. They are the Long Island Ducks and in anticipation of their first year, which was last year, they built a brand new $20 million baseball stadium on Courthouse Drive in Central Islip.

Nearly a half million people went to baseball games there between April and September last year, and, for the most part it was standing room only, and a great success. The Ducks won about as many games as they lost, coached by former Met first baseman Bud Harrelson and playing against teams such as the Bridgeport Bluefish, Atlantic City Surf and the Newark Bears.

I went a few times, and both times the Ducks won, the second time rallying in the bottom of the ninth. The level of play is good, there's a guy in a duck suit who spends most of his time between plays making a fool of himself on the sidelines, and, at the Seventh Inning Stretch, they brought a father and son out to the infield, and gave a prize out if the kid, who was about ten, could throw a ball through a hoop at least once in five tries.

The stadium is only a short forty-five minute drive from the Hamptons and I found an evening at the game to be a wonderful counterpoint — and reality check — to an evening at a cocktail party in Southampton. It was like taking a short vacation.

Now a man is suing the Long Island Ducks

football player to knock down a black New York Giant football player.

"There is now, for the most part, a level playing field in sports. Whites, blacks, the disabled, and with Title 9, women, have an equal opportunity to compete. It's quite an extraordinary achievement if you think about it. And it must be matched by leveling the playing fields in other arenas."

Jackson talked about the beating of Rodney King. King was a black man living in Los Angeles who some years ago was chased down in his car by four white police officers who stopped his car, pulled him out and then proceeded to beat him within an inch of his life.

"The hero of this story is not Rodney King," Jackson said. "Rodney King was the victim. The hero of this story is George Holliday, a white man, a virtually unknown white man to this day, who looked out the window of his apartment, saw what was going on, ran and got his video camera and taped it. And then went public with that tape. George Holliday did not say to himself, looking out his window, I'm glad those four police officers are beating up that criminal. He did not say to himself thank goodness those policemen are protecting me from that black man here in my neighborhood. He did not say to himself I'm sure the police know what they are doing. He did not say to himself I think I better not get involved. No. Something in him, some strength of character, said for him to do something about it. And he did."

As a result of this videotape, there was an official police investigation, an arrest made of the four white racist policemen, and a trial. But the police officers were acquitted. And after that, there were riots in the streets.

"During those riots," Rev. Jackson said, "a man driving a delivery truck went down the wrong street at the wrong time. Four black men pulled this man out from behind the wheel, and, even though it was being videotaped on live TV, began beating him, just because he was white. Know what happened? In a restaurant across the street, four black men, seeing what was going on on TV, raced outside and pulled those four men off the white man and by doing so probably saved his life. Bigotry. Hatred. It is color blind."

Since the death of the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., Rev. Jackson has spent nearly every day continuing the work of Dr. King, talking about it, urging people to get involved, urging the government to make the changes necessary to bring all people, whoever they may be, together to work for risks and won't sue the ball club.

"This was no foul ball being hit into the stands," Madden's attorney Michael Kelton said. "They are shooting these things into the crowd with an air cannon to intentionally whip up the crowd."

Well, yes. That's why you go to the ballgame.

This time of year, when you can't do much out of doors, it's a good time to pick up and go traveling, which a lot of people do. I'm one of them. And since I've been doing this paper for forty years, I've picked up and gone off a whole lot of times.

I have found, when I travel, that an interesting thing to do to better understand the culture is to go watch a professional baseball game. I attended a game in Mazatlan, where the fans, to express their displeasure at an umpire's call, set bonfires in the stands (which, fortunately, were made of concrete,) an act which caused a twenty minute "delay of game." In Cuba, when the pitcher gets in trouble, the whole team in the field comes to the mound to discuss the matter and, together with the coach, decide what to do about it. Communism.

They don't play baseball in New Zealand, but in Auckland I did go out to the stadium to watch a game of cricket, which is probably the most boring sporting event ever invented. Climbing into the stands, however, I was astonished to find everybody drunk. There were about 4,000 people in the stands, all sitting in the sunshine, about eighty percent men, about twenty percent women, none of them watching the match and one hundred percent drunk as skunks. Paper containers of beer were being thrown all over the place. If a woman climbed the stairs, all the men in the seats would whistle and make catcalls and stamp their feet at her, which, it seemed, was something she had hoped for. It was like Spring Break in Fort Lauderdale.

Meanwhile, out on the field, there were all these men smartly dressed very formally in sport jackets and ties, shorts and long socks, white hats and sneakers, ignoring what was going on in the stands and trying to whack a ball with a wooden wicket. This tandem activity went on for eight hours or so, the length of that time precisely marked on a scoreboard at the top of the stands. Every hour and a half, those on the field would call time out for "tea." Every four hours, they'd break for "lunch" or dinner. Meanwhile, the fans in the stands just went on drinking and sunning themselves and every once in a while, getting up and falling back down. Sometimes the match would continue the next day.

I've never seen anything like it. Certainly not at a Long Island Duck game. Or a fancy cocktail party in Southampton.

No, I take that back.

Bridgehampton National Bank Is Robbed, Plus Some Other Odd Hold-Ups

By Jerry Cimisi

On Thursday, January 11, the main branch of the Bank of Bridgehampton was robbed a little before three in the afternoon. As this is diagonally across from the offices of this paper, nearly everyone on the staff stood outside and watched the police frisk a young man who was suspected of being involved in the crime, but whom the police eventually released.

As the police on the scene would not give out any information to reporters but referred them to the forthcoming official statement from the Southampton Town Police, most all of the news about the robbery at first was hearsay.

Someone who said she had a friend who was a teller at the bank said this teller related the robber had pulled off the heist from the drive through window – a rather comical and somewhat puzzling modus operandi. One could only suppose that the bank robber wanted to be sure he would get away from the scene of the crime immediately.

"Did he do it through the tube?" one of our staff joked.

Of course the teller that services the drive through customers does so behind bullet proof glass and only needs to duck down to be out of range of any weapons. Further explanation to this story was that the teller was new and panicked, giving the robber the grand sum of $500 before he zoomed away.

Another story that was making the rounds the day of the robbery was that the robber had walked out of the bank and was arrested as he waited to catch a bus – which would have taken great timing and luck, as the buses run an hour apart.

At any rate, the press release issued by Southampton Town Police the next day put the drive through story to rest. The report stated that the bank had been robbed a little before 2:40 p.m. The robber had waited on line, given the teller a note saying he had a gun and had demanded money. The report states: "The teller complied with his request, then reported the incident to a supervisor as the suspect calmly left the bank on foot. No one was injured in the incident."

The police described the robber as a black male in his thirties.

The young man who was stopped and nearly arrested was as much the subject of conversation in the neighborhood that day and the day after as the robbery itself. For the young man, a high school student at the Bridgehampton school, it was a case of being in the wrong place at the wrong time. He had been walking westward on Montauk Highway (on which the bank is located) toward the bank, when he encountered the police.

He said, "They came up behind me, said take my hands out of my coat slowly and put them up against the car."

He did so; he was frisked and detained for a while. "They saw my student ID," he said.

Released and understandably somewhat shaken, the young man crossed over the police lines, went across Montauk Highway to the vicinity of Schmidt's Country Market, where he was accosted again, this time by reporters.

He said he had not been roughed up. But an

After the robbery he had driven right across the street to a Denny's and immediately ordered a cup of coffee.

uncle, who was now across the street talking in an obviously upset manner to the police, soon had this to say to the press:

"They said they stopped him because he answered the description. They told me the robber was wearing a dark jacket." (The young man was wearing a dark grey jacket.) "That's not a description," said the uncle, that's an article of clothing."

He went on: "Thank goodness he took his hands out of his pocket slowly. And what if he had something in his hands, what if they thought he had a gun? Fortunately, everything went OK."

The uncle's agitation might be even more appreciated from the fact that the police press release stated that the robber "was wearing a white down vest."

You will doubtless read the names of the youth and his uncle in other publications. It is felt that as he was not involved in the crime it might be embarrassing for him to be mentioned in connection with it. As he said, "I don't want my name in the paper."

As of presstime it is not known just how the robber made his getaway from outside the bank. There has been no arrest.

* * *

Although the robbery in Bridgehampton was a serious act – there are not many crimes in the Hamptons that occur with the threat of a gun, the stories about the robbery were mostly funny. This is in keeping with the folklore of bank robbing in America. If most bank robbers and their crimes are mundane, there are more than a few quirky bank robbers that serve as a sort of folk entertainment to the public – many of whom perhaps harbor a sympathy and even envy of those who take money from our financial institutions. "After all, they're insured," is a not uncommon response. This may be connected to the Robin

Hood syndrome, though no bank robber comes to mind who gave away his illegal gains.

We all know about Bonnie and Clyde, especially because of the great Warren Beatty-Faye Dunaway movie from 1967, but many of the more interesting bank robbers are infinitely less famous.

Here are some recent, curious, often humorous heists – or attempted heists.

Just after Christmas in 1997, the soon to be ex-mayor (he had just lost the election) of Darby, a Philadelphia suburb, walked into a bank and told a teller he had a bomb. He left the bank with $1,500. But an hour and a half later he turned himself in. Outgoing mayor Daniel F. Devlin, who had served four one-year terms, told police he anticipated money problems since losing his job.

Who says it's a young man's game? In 1999, in Pensacola, Florida, not only did an 88 year old man attempt to rob a bank, but he did so without any weapons. He was caught by customers as he tried – perhaps not too swiftly – to run off with the loot. J.L. Hunter Roundtree was homeless, police said, his last known address being in Alabama. He had walked into the bank and handed a teller a note that read, "Robbery, give me the hundreds."

It was not disclosed how much Roundtree didn't get away with, but there is well founded speculation that he has to be the oldest bank robber ever in America. There was an 82 year old bank robber in Colorado in 1989.

Roundtree was tackled by customers as he fled across the bank's parking lot.

Also in 1999, a bank robber tried to escape on a bicycle from a New Jersey bank. John Gavigan, pumping station operator for the Bergen County Utilities Authority and John Ruehl, a United Water Company field representative, followed the fleeing robber in a van. Gavigan had entered the bank as the robbery was in progress. After the robber took off on a bicycle from the bank, Gavigan ran outside and tried to flag down motorists. It was Ruehl who stopped and they both gave chase.

As the robber made as if he were in the Tour De France, he waved his gun at his pursuers. Ruehl thought it must be fake and later said the robber looked like a idiot, racing on a bicycle and waving what surely must be a toy gun.

The police joined the chase and apprehended the robber. The gun turned out to be real indeed. And the suspect, Lawrence Rudlott, of Dumont, New Jersey, lived right next door to the police station.

Gotta have a cup o' java. In February, 2000, an Indianapolis man, Tanoa Goodpaster, 53, was arrested after robbing a bank of $21,000. He was apprehended in a restaurant where he had stopped for coffee. After the robbery he had driven right across the street to a Denny's and immediately ordered a cup of coffee. Perhaps he wanted to kick back and relax, October, 1999: Not for the faint hearted – or, the bank robber as Good Samaritan. When a man walked into a Wells Fargo bank in the state of Washington, he handed a teller a note informing her this was a robbery.

The teller fainted – and the bank robber's concern immediately became not for his loot but the welfare of the teller. He called to the other tellers. They came over, he left – they did not know what he was up to.

When the teller came to, she related what had happened. The kind hearted bank robber remained at large.

Bank robbing doesn't just happen in America. A bank robbery in Yangzhou, China was notable not only for its harsh sentence but the method the robbers, two brothers, used. They hacked into a bank's computer system and stole the equivalent of $31,000. The sentence: death for one brother, and, for the other, who aided police, life.

A Canadian bank robber who had written a best seller about his life of crime and married a prominent Canadian poet, returned to his old ways in 1999. Stephan Reid, 49, after twelve years of freedom since he had last done time, was arrested trying to rob a bank in Victoria, British Columbia.

Reid had done 14 years behind bars in three different stints – because he escaped two times. He had been involved with the infamous Stopwatch Gang, which had been implicated in 100 robberies and had been so named because of their precision.

Reid was arrested through a fluke. Police arrived at the bank while the robbery was in progress; they had been answering a complaint about a panhandler.

Reid and an accomplice led police on a chase and shootout, with the robbers firing shotguns. From an apartment building they engaged the police in a standoff for five hours before surrendering.

Reid's wife, noted poet Susan Musgrave, said she had no idea her husband had returned to his old ways.

And then there's the man who engineered a robbery at a bank where his mother worked. In 1997, Damion Blunt, 23, dropped off his mother at a Dallas bank. As soon as mom started her day, two men walked in, robbed the bank of $313,000 and left. Mom recognized them as her son's friends. The pair was arrested that day and Blunt the day after, charged with plotting the robbery. • equality, peace and respect for one another's differences. He has been doing this, throwing the seeds into the wind as he put it — some of the seeds to land on rocks, some in the water, some on fertile ground where they have taken root — for nearly forty five years.

Jackson asked if there were questions.

"You've talked about Martin Luther King's legacy,"

a man from the audience said. "Do you think your work is done? And what do you think your own legacy will be?"

(The man had introduced himself as a "Native American" bringing the response "Me Too" promptly from Jackson. Nothing was getting by him.)

"I hope my work is NOT done," he told the man, in answer to his question. "And I don't think about any legacy. I just do, every day, what comes up that day for me to do to help people. I've been in jail. First time I was jailed was in 1960 for trying to use a public library. I can tell you there is no legacy involved in being in jail. I just do what I have to do, every day sending out more seeds. And hope some of them take root."

ESTEBAN VINCENTE (1903-2001)

By Jerry Cimisi

After a long and fruitful life and career that began early in the 20th century and ended after the beginning of the next, Esteban Vicente of Bridgehampton died at 97, ten days before his 98th birthday.

A local fixture, Vicente and his third wife Harriet had lived in Bridgehampton since 1964. (His wife survives him.) Vicente was born on January 20, 1903 in Turégano (in Segovia), Spain. He eventually established a reputation for himself as a painter in Europe and then, in America, as one of the premier Abstract Expressionists.

Vicente's father was a military officer who was also an amateur painter. Vicente was educated by the Jesuits, went to a military academy briefly, but left after only a few months and began to study sculpture at the Royal Academy of Fine Arts of San Fernando in Madrid. He eventually left sculpting for painting and was first exhibited in 1928.

He left for Paris the following year, though for a time he returned to Barcelona frequently, where he was exhibited.

When civil war broke out in Spain in the 1930s, Vicente was a volunteer for the Loyalists and painted camouflage units in the mountains not far from Madrid.

It was in 1936 that Vicente came to New York, where he would make his international reputation. Through the 1940s his work was more and more influenced by such artists as Picasso (whom he had met in Paris) and Mondrian. By the late '40s, Vicente's work had settled into an abstract vein.

In the the 1950s, Vicente became one of the prominent figures of Abstract Expressionism.

Vicente was represented by prominent dealers, such as Leo Castelli. At the time of his death, Vicente was represented by the Berry Hill Galleries, who had represented him since 1989.

Critics said Vicente's talent was not so much as an innovator, such as the case with Jackson Pollock, but as someone who could gather the most important aspects of a movement and meld them into his own distinct touch.

In 1964 Vicente was among the founders of the New Studio School on Eighth Street. He taught at Black Mountain College, the University of California at Berkeley, New York University and Yale.

Throughout his life, Vicente would not have his work exhibited while Franco was in power, but in 1988, with Franco long gone, the government of Spain created the Esteban Vicente Museum of Contemporary Art in Segovia. On February 8, an exhibition of Vicente's most recent work opens there.

Vicente's works have been exhibited worldwide. He hangs in London's Tate and the Reina Sofia in Madrid. He is in the permanent collection of the Museum of Modern Art. The New Studio School (where Vicente taught as recently as two years ago) has an exhibit of Vicente's prints that were done for an anthology of Spanish poetry. The exhibit runs until February 24.

Vicente wanted his remains cremated and placed in his museum in Segovia. •

The Port Of Missing Men

Conservation Easement On 540 Acres In Southampton Is Deeded To The Peconic Land Trust By Louis Bacon

By Susan Simm

Late last December, financier Louis Bacon, chairman of Moore Capital Management, gifted the Peconic Land Trust with a conservation easement over the 540-acre Cow Neck Farm in North Sea, Southampton. This is the largest privately owned parcel in Southampton Town and has been high on the list of the Town and local preservation groups for acquisition and preservation for some time.

Cow Neck Farm is a place of incredible, undisturbed natural beauty. Surrounded by Scallop Pond, Little Sebonac Creek and Great Peconic Bay, the land is comprised of tidal and freshwater wetlands and woods of beech, bayberry and oak. A dairy farm, which was in operation until the mid-80s, lies in the flatlands at the southern tip. The silo and farm buildings are still visible from Island Creek Road. There is a magnificent view of Robins Island (purchased by Bacon in 1993) from high cliffs that drop straight down to Great Peconic Bay. This peninsula, along with much of the land that surrounds Scallop Pond, was once a privately owned estate of 1200 acres. It was called the "Port of Missing Men" and, like all great estates, has a fascinating past.

The story begins a long time ago with Henry Huttleston Rogers, who was later nicknamed "Hellhound" by his enemies on Wall Street. In 1861, when Henry was 21, he headed to the newly discovered oil fields in Pennsylvania to seek his fortune. By 1874, Henry would be on the board of directors at John D. Rockefeller's newly formed company, Standard Oil.

Despite his reputation as a cutthroat, Rogers was admired as a man of wit and intellect. He rose quickly in the new corporation and, by 1890, was vice-president. Most of his time was devoted to managing the huge trust, known as "Standard Oil" on Wall Street, with William Rockefeller, John's brother. He developed a notorious reputation, and vast wealth, in his pursuit of other business interests such as gas, copper, banking 1901 and would later become chief financial officer at Standard Oil. He stayed in contact with Mark Twain, his father's close friend whom Henry Rogers reportedly rescued from financial ruin, and Twain dedicated his book, Following the Equator, to Harry.

In 1914, Harry commissioned prominent architects Walker & Gillette to design a beach house on the ocean on Southampton's tony Gin Lane. The house, known as "Black Point" (it is no longer standing) was palatial and formal, with gardens designed by Frederic Law Olmstead.

But Harry had more plans. As an heir to the fantastic Standard Oil fortune, he was able to buy substantial acreage in the North Sea area of Southampton, miles from his Gin Lane mansion. So in 1928, he built, according to Town and and railroads. In 1899, he formed a giant trust, Amalgamated Copper, and was accused of some of the most ruthless strokes in modern business history, such as the wrecking of the Globe Bank of Boston.

Henry Huttleston "Harry" Rogers II, Henry's only son, was known as "The Colonel" for his service as lieutenant colonel in the National Guard during WWI. Though he distinguished himself in the military, he lived off his father's fortune. This enabled him to indulge his many passions, including hunting and collecting.

Harry lived a privileged life. He grew up on 57th Street, graduated from Columbia University in Country, "a simple man's retreat, not to be confused with the spacious, Italianate house" on Gin Lane. He called it the "Port of Missing Men."

The estate grew, over the years, to a total of 1200 acres. Harry used this house as a hunting lodge and entertained his wealthy peers in high style. Harry clearly loved this house and spent quite a lot of time there.

Over the years, some mystery has come to surround the story of how the "Port of Missing Men" got its name. One story has it that Harry, walking along the water's edge, found a rudder from a ship that went down off Southampton in the 1890s and another has it that he got the idea from a plane that had crashed into the sea.

Harry reportedly drank heavily as did his only son, H.H. Rogers III, and the two argued frequently. Harry died in Southampton in 1935, leaving his son a trust fund of $500,000 and cutting him out of the remainder of his $20 million estate. Henry Rogers III died at the age of 42. Harry's widow, Pauline Vandervoort, daughter Millicent and her son, Peter Salm, were the sole heirs.

Peter Salm-Hoogstraten was born in 1924 to Millicent Rogers and Count Ludwig Albrecht von Salm-Hoogstraten. His parents married in January of that year and were separated before Peter was born. Harry evidently did not approve of the marriage as he reportedly reduced Millicent's allowance, but was very fond of his grandson, Peter, eventually leaving him "Port of Missing Men." This would turn out to be a wise decision, as Peter would protect the natural beauty of the estate from development.

Peter was raised in Austria in the small village of St. Anton, attending Swiss boarding school with his two stepbrothers from Millicent's second marriage. About Millicent, Vogue fashion editor Bettina Ballard wrote in her memoir, In My Fashion, "Had she attached any importance to being a fashion leader, she could have led them all. Hers was a true natural elegance." She was known as the "Standard Oil Heiress."

Peter returned to America and graduated from Princeton in 1950. He then took up where his grandfather Harry had left off at the "Port of Missing Men." He lived there for many years, while also traveling and skiing in Europe, and continued the tradition of hunting by turning the estate into a world-class game preserve. Peter revived the English tradition of the driven shoot, where beaters go ahead of the hunters and flush the birds from cover. He is remembered as a perfectionist at maintaining the quality of life on his estate. Before his death in 1994, he entertained his wealthy friends and associates from New York who enjoyed all of these amenities. One of the visitors who hunted at the "Port of Missing Men" was a man who would someday be the new lord of the manor: Louis Bacon.

Louis M. Bacon, a futures and currency trader, founded Moore Capitol Management in the mid-80s, before which he worked for Merrill Lynch. According to Financial World, Bacon swaps "anything that trades" on international markets for a group of European investors. In 1990, Bacon "operated in obscurity, with less than $200 million," but in the wake of his phenomenal 39% return to investors on domestic funds and a higher rate on offshore investments, Bacon raised his total assets under management to over $1 billion in 1993. He holds a master's degree in finance from Columbia University and has proven to be a brilliant investor.

Brilliant investors make brilliant investments. Mr. Bacon purchased Cow Neck Farm, a 540-acre piece of the original estate, from the Salm family in 1998. It was, partially, in an effort to preserve the view of the property from Robins Island that Bacon gave the conservation easement to the Peconic Land Trust, but he will reap other rewards. He will most likely be entitled to a generous charitable contribution tax break but, most importantly, retains ownership of the property. The property remains private, with no public access allowed.

While Southampton Town saved "millions," according to Supervisor Cannuscio, by not having to use community funds to preserve this land, it also lost the right to provide public access and, more importantly, to preserve the property in its entirety.

The good news is that the original zoning was for three-acre house lots, so the property is preserved against major development and wildlife habitat will be protected. However, Mr. Bacon retains the right to build 5 single-family houses on a maximum of nine acres apiece. If developed, these mini-estates would each be worth millions, surrounded as they are by protected land.

It is important to remember, as Kevin Law, Mr. Bacon's lawyer points out, that "the neat thing [for the owner] about a conservation easement is that you give up certain rights, but not all your rights." A successful investor, whom Bacon has certainly proven to be, keeps his options open. According to Mr. Law, Mr. Bacon, in addition to preserving land, "is looking to preserve some flexibility." While there are "no plans" on the table to build at the present time, "Mr. Bacon has only owned the property for two years, so it's hard to figure out exactly what he's going to do." Only time will tell.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

OBSERVATIONS OF A NEW ISLANDER #138 - THE X MAN COMETH

Last week my ex-spouse came to visit the children for a week. I vacated the house and stayed with my mother while he stayed with the kids and got to have the full single parent experience complete with the tasks of referee, toy hostage taking and peace negotiator.

A lot of divorced couples live on Shelter Island. It is beyond me how one could live in the same small town as one's ex. You have to see the ex with their new partner and see them and their new partner with your children. I couldn't do it. I don't have that level of strength. The temptation to run the happy couple over with my van would be overwhelming. And what if I ran into them in the grocery store? How many people would it take to stop me from pushing her head into the coffee grinder? Not to mention a couple of parts of him too.

I have a real issue with infidelity. We have one single mom on this Island who has a hobby of dating married men. She's like the Typhoid Mary of Marriage, leaving a wake of human wreckage as she passes by. The best part is that she's a dedicated church-goer! Ovaries of steel I tell ya!

Having been the victim of infidelity, I can see why it's listed in the Ten Commandments as a no-no. It murders trust and no-trust murders love. They say that family is the core of society. We forget that marriage is the core of family. It really is important to invest in your partner and mutually put each other's needs first. The people with the marriages that have lasted have all stuck it out through the periods when you feel out of touch with each other, because love comes back. I met a couple who had been married 52 years once. I asked the man if he ever thought of divorce through all those years, he said, "Divorce, never. Not even once. Murder... a thousand times."

I've been asked out three times on this Island and all three times by married men. It infuriates me. I wanted to call their wives and tell them. Finally, a few months ago, I got asked out by a nice single man. Single, heterosexual, breathing, gainfully employed, not a drinker or smoker, and living on Shelter Island all at the same time. Unbelievable, like finding the Holy Grail. I'm keeping him a secret because the other single moms will rush me for him. My ex had a fit. He doesn't want a "parade of men" going through his children's lives. I guess he noticed that long line of eligible men by my front door that wraps around the back of the house... I try to keep them orderly. I have a machine by my front door with those "Take a Number and Be Seated" tickets. Of course the fact that my ex has been living with another woman since long before our divorce isn't really applicable here.

Often I feel bad that we couldn't mend the marriage and now my kids have to grow up without a father in the home, but then my ex visits and does things that help me get through that feeling.

Tomatoes.

Let me give you a little background. Whenever something is missing from where my ex thinks it should be, he jumps to the assumption that someone broke into the house and took that item. He has always done this and it always drove me nuts.

Back to the tomatoes. He bought some cherry tomatoes and steak and other groceries last week. I was talking with my daughter on the phone and heard a familiar diatribe beginning in the background.... "Where are the tomatoes? They were right here! I put them right here on top of the steak! Who took them? Someone has been in this house and stole the tomatoes!" And so it began. My daughter hung up to help him find the missing tomatoes.

An hour later I spoke with my daughter again. She told me her Dad remained convinced that someone had broken into the house and stolen the tomatoes. She suggested he may have them left them at the store, but he dismissed that outright. If he left them at the store that would constitute a mistake on his part, so obviously the tomatoes were not left at the store. He did however check the car, it was found to be cold, dark and tomatoless. The conclusion was inescapable, somebody pilfered those tomatoes!

It's probably true. Somebody broke in, walked past my TV, my VCR, my radio, my computer, my jewelry, headed for the refrigerator, bypassed the thick steak and went straight for my tomatoes. Happens all the time. Vegetable thieves on Shelter Island. We just can't control them. People come home all the time to find squash missing, cucumbers, lettuce, potatoes, you name the veggie, they'll take it. It starts every year when the vegetable stands close. The veggie thieves are forced to steal from people's homes. Whenever veggies are missing on Shelter Island, it's those fiber seeking veggie thieves!

Now that I think of it.. is it possible this new man in my life is one of them? A veggie thief seeking an easy mark? I love salads, he could have seen me in the IGA produce section snapping off those little baggies for the short people. Did he see me pickin' peas? Did he see the way I look at the zucchini? Is he in fact, just after my tomatoes? To paraphrase Mae West, was that a carrot in his pocket the other night? Or was he just happy to see me?

My X-man has returned to Seattle. The kids are nagging me for a dog. The house needs a thorough cleaning and purging of excess things. Car needs a tune-up. My life exists on the continuum between SNAFU, FUBAR and the dreaded CF. So everything is normal again. •

Bridgehampton and the world lost one of its important individuals this week. The Spanish painter, Esteban Vicente, age 97, died this week. His passing creates a space that can only be partially filled by the body of work he leaves us. He lives on through his paintings, through his friends, through his wife and through this community. He leaves us with a memory of grace and elegance. He was a man of strong opinion, strong presence, and great talent.

Esteban Vicente lived and worked next to the Bridgehampton School for as long as I can remember. His morning ritual included walking to the post-office. My mornings often included greeting Esteban and exchanging a few words in Spanish. He was very encouraging when I was starting to learn the language and eventually my Spanish got better. We were able to say more than "Buenos dias." Senor Vicente spoke with elegance. He had old-world charm. He had extraordinary stories.

I remember stopping at a party with my mother a few summers ago. I was acting as her driver and escort at the time. She wanted to stop for fifteen minutes in Bridgehampton, enroute to another party. She came looking for me after twenty minutes. She said she has seen me make a beeline towards someone when we arrived. I hadn't greeted anyone else or mingled at all. She was curious as to who had grabbed my attention. It was Esteban Vicente. Although I was sitting next to him, it seemed I was perched at his feet hanging on his every word. I was like a devotee looking up to a master. He was talking to me about painting. He said that painting should not come from the intellect. He said it must come from the heart. His words have rebounded for me countless times. I use his words as a guide for my own paintings. I quote him all the time. I encourage painters to paint from the heart and forget about salability. If someone is painting for the commercial value alone, the paintings are lacking heart and soul. Painting for money alone does not make a good painter. I'm afraid I have never seen a good painting come from purely financial inspiration. There are a lot easier ways to make money.

In Roberta Smith's obituary for The New York Times she says, "one of the last surviving members of the first generation of New York School painters, died on Wednesday at his home in Bridgehampton." Esteban Vicente was a friend of Picasso, Willem de Kooning, Philip Guston, Rothko, Hans Hofmann and many more. He was a part of the Abstract Expressionist movement. He helped establish the New York School. He was involved with encouraging young artists. He supported local charities including the Retreat.

They say, "behind every great man there is a great woman." Esteban had the great fortune or perhaps wisdom to be married to Harriet who worked with him to keep the business end of life together. I'm sure I speak for the whole community in expressing our condolences. The death of Esteban Vicente is a loss to all of us. He was a great man and leaves behind a great richness.

Show, Nadine Witken spent the weekend in mud and warm sea water; and jazz legend Percy Heath dined with WPBX president Walley Smith at the Sea Grille this week. Does that ring any bells?

World-renowned jazz pianist Judy Carmichael of Sag Harbor debuted a new weekly talk show Sunday, January 7, on WPBX 88.3 FM, Long Island's Public Radio station based at Southampton College. Judy Carmichael's Jazz Inspired, produced with Steinway and Sons, enlists some well-known guests in coming weeks. Jackson (Continued from page 20)

Jackson said that on January 20, Inauguration Day, he would be in Tallahassee, the scene of the crime, as he put it, to lead a demonstration demanding election reform so "those who lose an election don't get to win again," as he put it, and "those who win don't get to lose."

He said the election was behind us and what was done was done.

"But this should not have been about winning an election at all costs," he said. "It was wrong. A person has a right to vote and to have that vote counted."

He said there would be a secondary demonstration about election reform in Washington. And he hoped there would be a third one here in the Hamptons, and that the students of the Ross School would make it happen.

"I fear Mr. Bush is going to lead us down a very reactionary path, trying to undue a lot that has been done," he said. "Well, there has been a lot done and there will be a lot of opposition to his trying to undo it."

Rev. Jackson's speech was stirring, straightforward and inspiring. It was also laced with humor. He is an exciting speaker, focused on the future, and his thoughts were clearly a challenge to the students of the school to look to themselves to make a difference in their lives and be a help to others. He got a standing ovation at the end of his speech.

WINTER GETAWAYS

Palm Springs: Still Fabulous

Nothing quite prepares you for this oasis in the middle of the desert. Driving east from Los Angeles, there are miles and miles of open, flat desert dotted with thousands of windmills. These are not the old-fashioned, Dutch-variety, picturesque windmills: these are high tech and they are FAST! And there are many, many of them. They are part of a "wind farm" of more than 4,000 turbines that generate enough electricity to supply the needs of more than 93,000 homes in the desert communities!

Palm Springs, along with its neighboring communities Palm Desert, Cathedral City and Rancho Mirage, is located in southern California's Coachella Valley south of Joshua Tree National Park and the Little San Bernardino Mountains. This fashionable resort community became a Hollywood haunt in the 1920s when La Quinta Hotel opened the area's first golf course. Land sold for $30 an acre and soon celebrities like Ginger Rogers, Clark Gable and Humphrey Bogart were heading east regularly to play tennis at the Palm Springs Racquet Club.

The desert communities were also the final destination for retirees looking for sunshine and warm weather and this continues today. During the "season" (January-April), wealthy winter visitors mix with actors, tourists and year-round residents (Sounds a lot like the Hamptons during our "season," doesn't it?). Endless rounds of parties, world-class golf and tennis draw a diverse crowd. There are so many different things to see and do here you almost don't miss the ocean. Almost.

For those of you who appreciate natural beauty, there is great exploring to be done here. The Indian Canyons, a few miles south of downtown, are oases of natural springs and wildlife. Tahquitz Canyon, noted for its waterfalls and pools, is one of five canyons that surround Palm Springs. It is lush and tropical and was the setting for the original version of the film Lost Horizon. These canyons are the ancestral home of the Cahuilla Indians, and they still own most of the land. These canyons support more than 5,000 fan palms, the only palm native to North America. Hiking maps are available at the Trading Post.

If golf is your thing, this is the place for you: Palm Springs is known as the "Winter Golf Capital of the World." There are more than 100 golf courses here to choose from, and quite a few of these courses are open to the public. Among these are the Palm Springs Municipal Golf Course and Fairchild's Bel-Aire Greens

Country Club. Mission Hills Resort Golf Club, located in Rancho Mirage, is a challenging Pete Dye-designed course and it is home to many major tournaments.

Looking to shop? Palm Canyon Drive is Palm Spring's main shopping destination, although Palm Desert also has many interesting shops and boutiques. What began as a dusty two-way dirt road is now a one-way, three lane thoroughfare with parking on both sides. Among the fashionable shops you will find Saks Fifth Avenue and Gucci. El Paseo is the trendiest shopping spot in the desert. French and Italian fashion boutiques, shoe salons, jewelry designers and many, many restaurants, complete with outdoor misters to keep diners cool in the desert heat, line this two-mile Mediterranean-style avenue.

One of the reasons the Palm Springs attracts so many celebrities and other notables is its stock of luxurious hotels. Among the most famous are Two Bunch Palms, reputedly built by Al Capone as an escape from gangsterdom in the 1920s. This collection of white-washed villas on 250 acres is still something of a secret hideaway for Hollywood celebrities. Another desert original is La Quinta Hotel Golf and Tennis Resort, built in 1926. Rooms are in historic adobe casitas separated by broad expanses of lawn. There are also newer, two-story units with individual swimming pools and exotic gardens.

For all its upscale trappings, Palm Springs is a small, friendly community. Street crime is virtually unknown here.

Although you can fly directly into Palm Springs, flying into Los Angeles and making the two-hour drive east will reward you with the surprise of finding this lush jewel in the middle of the desert

Shop 'til You Drop With Maria Tennariello

The weather is warming a bit and it's getting easier to get around with the snow and the ice melting. Let's hope it stays this way. Let's do some winter shopping.

Getting the decorating blues? Have no fear, Joseph's Interior Design is near. Located on Montauk Highway in Eastport, look for their pre-season sale with up to 30% off labor and fabric. They do re-upholstering, window treatments, drapery and bedroom ensembles. Call for information at 325-0176 or 283-5890.

At Marders on Snake Hollow Road in Bridgehampton, a brand new shipment of antiques has arrived and there is a cool 20% to 50% off sale on selected books, gifts, houseplants, containers and baskets going on right now in the Garden Shop. By the way, this is a great place to be on a nice sunny day, and you will be surprised at the selection of garden goodies and antiques here.

Across the Commons, take a ride on the wild side and stop off at Razzano's for that Super Bowl Party Package they are offering for that big fun family day. For only $99 you can serve up to 15 people with a four foot party hero, your choice of Italian or American, potato salad and cole slaw, either or both up to four pounds, a tray of baked ziti and chicken wings. Add a fabulous dessert like tiramisu for $15 that is enough for eleven portions, and voila! What a deal for $99! I'm going to invite my entire family out for the day and never even have to think about cooking. Call Razzano's for information at 537-7288.

If you are looking to do some volunteer work, think Guild Hall Gift Shop. The shop, which is open during museum hours, before performances and during intermission is completely run by volunteers. Managed by Eugenia Bartell, it offers a selection of art books and posters, cards, unique gifts, creative toys for children and much more. Hours are flexible and shop volunteers receive 25% off merchandise. Now that's a good deal! Call 631-324-0806 for information.

Looking for an extravagant sale? Well, I found one at Bonne Nuit on Main Street in East Hampton. Look for a savings of up to 75% on lingerie fit for a queen. Do check this one out...

At Who'd-A-Thought on Newtown Lane in East

Hampton there is 50% to 60% off everything!

Hot off the press... White's of Montauk is having their "Summer-Winter" clothing sale with a cool 50% off mens, ladies, kids swimwear, tops, shorts, shoes, pants, sweaters, hats and sweat shirts. Now that's a heck of a sale.

At Island Surf on Main Street in Sag Harbor there is a whale of a sale going on right now. Look for 50% off on almost everything in the entire store. Now is the time for you to get your surfing stuff at really discounted prices. Look for Maui Jims, wetsuits, Volcum, Roxy, Quicksilver, DSO, all winter jackets (Vortex), are half price, as well as surfing accessories, kayaking accessories, and all that cool stuff... Our Webmaster Leif has already shopped 'til he dropped, leaving with a bag full of great deals and is ready, willing and able to surf. Call Shawn, the owner at 725-0705 for complete details.

Time to run along and get on home so that I can chart my course for next week.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

A NIGHT AT THE MOVIES

People's Choice, Oscars, Golden Globes; its that time of year again. The buzz is in the air: about the winners, about the losers, about the fashion, about the glitz. The hype might be justified, many say 2000 was a solid year for entertainment, particularly at the movies. Whether you are looking for a rundown of the hottest movies and actors, or need some help with your flick picks, the web can be your guide. Happy Viewing!

THE CRITICS

www.screenit.com - Providing entertainment reviews, screenit.com is a reliable source available for parents and concerned adults. screenit.com rates movie content in a variety of categories, ranging from profanity to smoking to bad attitude.

www.salon.com - Visit the “Movie Page” for intelligent reviews and commentaries on the latest releases and movie news. Always current, usually accurate, the “Movie Page” is worth a visit for the straight story.

www.moviecritic.com - After rating a minimum of 12 movies, find out which movie rental would be your “best bet.” The more movies you rate, the more accurate the recommendations. Have a friend sign up and test your movie compatibility.

www.greatestfilms.org - If you are continually disappointed with your video/dvd rental choices, you may want to check out this site for a list of the 100 Greatest Films of All Time. Seen all of those? Try the list of the All Time USA Box Office Leaders.

THE INDUSTRY

www.aint-it-cool-news.com - A virtual rambling of gossip, spoilers, and nonsense; be entertained by this site's light approach to the movie industry. Visit the multimedia area to screen interviews and banned movie trailers.

www.moviebloopers.com - How'd I miss that? That's what you will be asking yourself after you see freeze-frame evidence of movie blunders on moviebloopers.com.

www.mrshowbiz.com - The latest paparazzi photos, entertainment news and movie reviews are just a few of the treasures waiting to be unearthed at mrshowbiz.com. The games are good for a laugh too, especially “Plastic Surgery Lab.”

www.film.com - A one-stop resource for current film information including reviews, previews and box office numbers. Full coverage of all the film festivals is another bonus.

www.indiewire.com - “The leading voice for the indies” will be providing full coverage of the 2001 Sundance Film Festival next month. In the meantime, enjoy the indiewire's daily news and tease yourself with Sundance nominations and previews.

www.imdb.com - “Prepare yourself for the biggest, best, most award-winning movie site on the planet,” boasts the Internet Movie Database. The bragging is justified. Any information you could possibly be after can be found in this database, including plot outlines, user ratings and actor biographies.

www.the-numbers.com - If it's the numbers you are after, look no further. Features include daily and weekly box office statistics along with day-to-day analyses, enabling the movie enthusiast to track his favorites among the record holders.

www.moviefone.com - Try out the modern day convenience of purchasing movie tickets online. No more lines and no more being turned away because of a sold-out movie. Useful articles are aplenty on moviefone.com, including one entitled “Hold that Butter: Stuff You Can Eat at the Movies Without Getting Fat.”

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

THE ART SCENE: FAR FROM THE HAMPTONS (Part #3 in a series devoted to "state of the arts" in diverse regions)

ART IN LONDON

London during both the spring and fall last year revealed diverse aesthetic, innovative, and perhaps most importantly, interactive experiences—from gazing across the Thames River at buildings lit up for the night to treading through the throngs at street fairs. Did we mention art gallery and museum-going as well — from South Bank's contemporary Tate Modern and Hayward to the avant-garde White Cube and Saatchi sites. And trips to artists' studios— from Henry Moore's charming country abode outside London to newcomer Torie Begg's crude industrial space near the docks.

Winding one's way among the stalls and shoppers at both the famous Portebello Road Market and the unknown (except to locals) East Street Market was every bit a sensual experience as any art show— such places reminding this critic of a bulky mixed media installation (or even a "happening"). Smells from the fresh bread and pastry, colors/ textures of produce, jewelry and cosmetics alike, and sounds from merchandisers manning their displays were certainly stimulating, at times too stimulating: a surreal sensory overload. Yet there was also a familiarity to it all: purchasing amber jewelry from Portebello Road's Maria Rush who remembered this critic from previous times; making new friends with Haime and Barry, a father and son who have owned their cosmetic stall for thirty years at East Street Market.

The museums/galleries were just as invigorating even if spectators interacted with the art instead of "live" people. The Tate Modern's ambience was a Postmodern hybrid of industrial design combined with a contemporary exhibit, "Intelligence: New British Art, 2000." Favorites included Sarah Lucas' sculpture featuring two burnt-out cars, mixing Duchamp with punk, and Yinka Shonibare's nuclear family of astronauts ("Vacation") using African textiles. (Coincidentally, this critic had seen the same artist's work near Brighton at Eastbourne's Towner Gallery the week before.)

While the nearby Hayward Gallery was not showing "New" artists with its display, "Force Fields," we can imagine that these well-known individuals must have had an influence on Tate Modern's exhibitors. The Hayward presentation focused on fresh ways of expressing abstraction and movement in twentieth century art with examples by Man Ray, Moholy-Nagy, Hans Haacke and Len

Moholy-Nagy at Hayward

Lye, among others.

HONORING THE ARTIST: PETER VON ARTENS

The catalog accompanying artist Peter Von Artens' show at the Wally Findlay Gallery in East Hampton has an initial line that can't be ignored: "Peter von Artens was born in 1937 in the abundant paradise of Buenos Aires, Argentina."

From the looks of his paintings, that's a most apt description of Mr. Von Artens' art itself. One is immediately struck by the lush lemons and bananas holding court on a wicker stool, the mounds of copious rolls and bread sitting in a basket.

"Abundant" has another meaning in Mr. Von Artens' paintings: luxurious. Despite the earthy and natural produce and breads, there is a distinct sense of affluence: objects placed on fine tablecloths with opulent lighting effects certainly add to this ambience.

Even so, there's also a playful spirit present: in one particular painting, watermelon pieces are placed on a table, each piece cut in an unusual shape. Another work features a musical instrument which resembles fruit or vegetables, thus conveying whimsy. Yet the work also signifies both meanings of "abundance": lushness and opulence (the instrument is gold).

While Mr. Von Artens' abundant and sensuous imagery may have derived from his place of birth, there are probably other contributing factors. Consider, for example, his diverse art training at the Workshop for Plastic Arts in Santiago, Chile, at the School of Fine Arts at the Catholic University of Chile and at the Institute of Hispanic Culture in Madrid, Spain.

Given Mr. Von Artens' experience, it's easy to see why he has also exhibited in diverse places which featured his equally varied subjects, including Chile ("Cities and Landscapes"), New York ("Surrealism"), and Venezuela ("Jungles").

Looking through a book about Mr. Von Artens reveals other aspects of his creative endeavors which possess both similarities and differences when related to the Wally Findlay exhibit. For example, there's his "Queen," an oil on canvas recalling a medieval knight (or knightess— it's a female figure). The face is a pinwheel configuration, signifying playfulness. It's a bit surreal, too, and certainly spells affluence with its color gold.

Then there's Mr. Von Artens' "Stone Alter 1," an unexpected oil with its abstract shapes and earthy (non-affluent) colors. Even so, his "Blocks of Marble" may convey the same abstraction, but the objects are definitely opulent with their jade-like texture and hues.

MAYOR KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

This film is quite good, but not a home run.

In all of the discussions about this film, we are led to believe that the dialogue in the White House between President Jack Kennedy (Bruce Greenwood), Attorney General Bobby Kennedy (Steven Culp), Robert McNamara (Dylan Baker), Kenny O'Donnell (Kevin Costner) and other Presidential advisors is real and taken from audiotapes made during thirteen days of meetings from October 16 through October 28: the Cuban missile crisis.

But we know that everything is not real because at one point O'Donnell calls an American pilot and instructs him not to admit to being shot at if that happens when he flies over Cuba looking for missiles.

The reason for the lie would be to prevent gung ho shot at and returns to the base with several holes in his plane. When General LeMay asks him whether he had been attacked by either the Cubans or the Russians, the pilot says no and claims that the holes were made by birds. That is such an incredible explanation, it makes other factual elements of the film suspect. In any event, however, the Cuban missile crisis makes it a good story.

This film occasionally looked more like it was produced for television, but overall the acting was terrific. The script was interesting and, on occasion, even suspenseful, though we all know the outcome before it happens.

military men like General LeMay (Kevin Conway) from ordering a retaliatory strike. When the pilot does fly over Cuba, he is in fact

REAR VIEW MIRROR DRIVING

WARNING: OBJECTS IN THIS REVIEW MAY BE SMALLER THAN THEY APPEAR. The above caution should be affixed to all movie reviews as so many use the rave phrase "The Best Movie of the Year!" Traffic, the very fine recent film, has received that accolade in spades and, for some good reasons. However, in one (only ONE) issue of The New York Times, I counted twelve other films given the same kingly title! In that same issue one reviewer used the same appellation for another film as well . . . and two days earlier his same rave line adorned yet another film's advertisement. All three the Best Movie of the Year? (I won't give you his name but, I think of him as being all thumbs). Do I have an old fashioned idea of language? Shouldn't a reviewer perhaps qualify the publicity driven line that guarantees inclusion in advertising . . . how about a more honest . . . "One of the Best Films of the Year"? That won't get the reviewer's name in print. Advertising is a creative form. . . truth would only inhibit it's purpose.

DEADLY GRIDLOCKS

Traffic is probably one the better movies of the year, at least it tried to be and that counts. Is it the best movie of the year? Is it that good? This studious, old stickler woefully thinks, NAY! It is Free-based (like cocaine, the film's over-dosed subject) on the British TV miniseries, TRAFFIK. Telecast in 1989 it tracked the relentless drug trade from its primitive Pakistani origins to the main stream, chaotic gutters of Britain. This represents, to my mind, the movies major flaw. At its core, behind the flashy, Independent film styles of mannerisms and fractured plot segments checker-boarded rather recklessly, while inter-connecting . . . there is, back there, the tired representation of yesterday's now taken for granted news headlines. This fact colors everything. It injects itself into the arteries of the excellent direction, some brilliant performances and terribly important subject matter. . . tainting almost all of the highly dramatic and grueling scenes with that awful gnawing shadow of . . . I've seen this before. And, there are a lot of them because Traffic's reach is so extended. Desert scenes in Mexico. Washington D.C. vistas and interiors, Ohio family and street scenes, opulent lifestyles in southern California . . . on and on . . . backgrounds for a panoramic, heavily decorative frieze of the America's drug war which, obviously (and the film reasserts) we, the would be good guys are losing.

MEXICAN STANDOFF

The director Steven Soderbergh, is to be lauded for an extremely ambitious multi-flexed display, deliberately agitated, deliberately rough-grained, intentionally dispersed, icy blued and even bland embellishments that add tone to the familiar: Family scenes like American

Beauty, good-guy cops and bad-guy thugs like Pulp Fiction, epic, clashing palettes and film techniques of notable Oliver Stone flicks, torturous Hispanic political treachery of Costa Gravas films and the nervous, large Nashville, canvas of Robert Altman are all sources for the Traffic Jam-boree of drug dealers, users, pushers, enforcers (on both sides), phony politicians and the wasted bystanders.

For grand performances don't look to Michael Douglas as a fledgling Drug Czar who can't wage total war when his daughter is a druggie. But, Ericka Christensen, as the daughter gives a knockout performance. Mr. Douglas gives, his usual, more attitude than acting. Benicio Del Toro is great as the truly good Mexican cop. Don Cheadle is a fine Pulp Fiction, U.S. agent. Amy Irving is perfectly misty eyed and low keyed mother-wife to Douglas. The wheezing, conniving Mexican Generale of Tomas Milian is skin crawling. And 6 month pregnant, Catherine Zeta-Jones makes a steely leap from well-cushioned socialite to cold blooded dealer.

Traffic moves and ties-up as it was intended. It is educational with a lot of audiovisual hot sauce to keep your attention away from the sleepy, text book reiterations.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

If you're hooked into TV, which I'm not, the name "Survivor" is being referred to everywhere in the media. The reference is to last season's hit TV show "Survivor" and as I understand it, based on its enormous success, the networks are planning a slew of them.

For me, "survivor" means eating well at any time of the year, and in particular in the middle of winter when choices may not be as abundant as other times of the year. I tend to load up my larder with potatoes, leeks, onions and carrots. These vegetables become the basis for marvelous winter soups and stews that can go a long way. Cut up a head of broccoli, par-boil it now and cook it later, or as much as you need for an individual meal, in a savory mix of olive oil, garlic and dried hot pepper. Hot and hearty chicken or beef stews and meatloaf are do-ahead dishes that can be reheated. The idea is to have choices and the convenience of do-it yourself prepared foods.

It just makes good sense to cook nourishing meals at home — to feed the body as well as the soul.

PUREE OF VEGETABLE SOUP WITH PEARL BARLEY

A medley of vegetables works in harmony to create a fine mid-winter soup. Add cooked pearl barley to give it substance and it's a meal in a bowl.

Makes 6-8 servings

1 large leek, dark, bruised outer leaves removed
2 Russet potatoes, peeled and cut into coarse pieces
4 carrots, trimmed, peeled and cut into coarse pieces
4 zucchini, trimmed, scrubbed and cut into coarse pieces
2 large garlic cloves, peeled and roughly chopped
1 cup canned plum tomatoes with some juice
6 cups homemade or canned low-sodium chicken broth
Coarse (kosher) salt to taste
2 tablespoons unsalted butter or olive oil

For the barley (optional)

1 cup pearl barley, well rinsed
2 1/2 cups water
Coarse (kosher) salt to taste
1 tablespoon unsalted butter or olive oil, optional

1. Cut the leek in half lengthwise and rinse the layers under cold running water. Soak in a bowl of clean water to rid excess dirt or sand. Drain and pat dry. Chop coarsely and put into a soup pot with the potatoes, carrots, zucchini, garlic, tomatoes and broth. Bring to the edge of a boil, season to taste with salt, then simmer with cover ajar for 25-30 minutes until vegetables are tender. Let cool, then puree with an immersion hand blender or in batches in a standard blender. Add butter or olive oil, taste for salt and stir to mix.

2. Meanwhile, in a medium saucepan, bring the water, salt and butter or oil, if using, to a boil. When boiling stir in the barley, cover and simmer on low heat for 20-25 minutes, until tender but still a bit chewy. If any liquid remains, drain well. If liquid is absorbed before barely is tender, add hot water, about 1 tablespoon at a time. Let stand, covered, for 5-10 minutes then fluff with a fork. Add the amount you would like to the hot soup to give it body. Stir to mix. If necessary reheat the pureed soup before serving.

Note: For practical purposes, portion out the amount of soup you will need for one dinner. Refrigerate or freeze the remaining portion for another meal or two.

BROCCOLI SAUTE

Although broccoli is available year round it is in season from fall through spring. The dash of hot pepper flakes makes it a hearty choice on a winter menu. One bunch fresh broccoli as available in most supermarkets will yield about 4 cups, cooked. Then saute the desired amount as suggested below.

Makes 6-8 servings

1 bunch broccoli
Coarse (kosher) salt
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1-2 cloves garlic, cut into thin slivers
Pinch hot pepper flakes
Freshly ground pepper (optional)

1. Remove and discard tough part of stem of broccoli. Rinse vegetable thoroughly. Cut away heavy stem, peel, cut 3-4 slashes along the sides of the stem and set aside. Pull flowerets from the broccoli branch.

2. Place flowerets and stems in boiling salted water just to cover, quickly cover pan and remove lid when steam starts to escape. Blanch for 1 1/2 minutes until barely tender. Drain in a colander under a spray of cool water to stop the cooking; then transfer to a clean kitchen towel and pat dry. Can be cooked ahead to this point and refrigerated in a suitable container.

3. When ready to serve place one or two tablespoons olive oil in non-stick skillet. Warm oil over moderate heat then put in one-fourth or one-third of the broccoli, garlic and hot pepper flakes. Stir-saute for 1-1/2-2 minutes to finish cooking and heat through. Season with salt and freshly ground pepper. Serve warm or at room temperature.

To Prepare Ahead: Follow steps 1 and 2 up to several hours ahead. Complete step 3 before serving.

BRAISED CHICKEN WITH VEGETABLE RAGOUT

How many times have we simply browned chicken pieces then simmered them in a covered pan until done? Familiar, right? When you add sautéed chopped carrots, celery and onion with tomatoes and a bit of rosemary, the dish evolves into a fresh new way with chicken.

Serves 4-6

1 3-3 1/2 pound chicken, cut into eighths
3 tablespoons olive oil
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
2-3 carrots, peeled and cut into small dice
2 ribs celery, trimmed, rinsed and cut into small dice
1 onion, chopped coarsely
1 cup low-sodium chicken broth, preferably homemade
1 can (1 pound 12 oz.) tomatoes, drained
1 tablespoon chopped fresh rosemary leaves

1. Trim chicken parts of excess fat and pinfeathers. Rinse well and pat dry with paper towels.

2. Heat oil in a large skillet, and put in the chicken pieces to brown evenly on all sides, about 2-3 minutes. Season the chicken with salt and paper and transfer to a side dish. Put the carrots, celery and onion in the hot fat in the skillet and saute for 3-4 minutes, stirring occasionally, until onion is translucent. Add chicken broth and bring to a boil. Simmer briskly for 4-5 minutes to reduce the liquid. Return chicken to pan and place over the vegetables. Pour tomatoes over and crush them with the side of a spoon. Season with rosemary, salt and pepper to taste.

3. With cover ajar, cook over medium heat and simmer for 20-25 minutes spooning over juices occasionally, until chicken is tender and flavors are melded. Serve hot with rice, if desired.

It's Our Garden WITH ELIZABETH AND CROW MILLER

Ready to start planting your creative container garden? First round up some pots. We like those inexpensive fake terra cotta-colored plastic containers. They're widely available in all shapes and sizes and look almost as good as real terra cotta, but don't dry out as fast as those very porous clay pots, so you don't have to water them nearly as often. They're also very lightweight and even stack compactly together when you're not using them.

Small plants like lettuce, chives and such can get by in 6-inch diameter (1/2 quart capacity) pot, but they'll probably do much better in a container that's 8-inches (3-quarts) across, and will absolutely thrive in a 10-inch pot, because it holds twice as much soil

(6-quarts).

For larger plants, such as tomatoes, eggplants and peppers you need to think big. Peppers require a pot that holds 2 or 3-gallons of soil, about 12-inches across. And tomatoes need at least a 5-gallon pot; commercial ones this size usually run 15-inches in diameter.

But your container doesn't have to be a commercial type pot. Punch some drainage holes in the bottom, and you can use the plastic 5-gallon capacity food buckets often discarded by delis, supermarkets and bakeries.

What you fill those containers with is also of importance. Commercial soilless potting mixes generally contain mostly peat moss, with some perlite and/or vermiculite (both are natural mineral substances) added to help hold moisture and for better aeration. But, since these mixes contain few plant nutrients, we strongly suggest adding one part compost and one part garden soil to every 2-parts of such a mix as you fill the pots. The compost will provide slow-release nutrients and introduce its innate disease-fighting microorganisms to the mix. And your own soil particles will help hold those nutrients in place until the plant roots take them up.

When plant roots are confined in containers, they can't roam through the soil in search of nutrients and water the way an in-ground plant can. So you need

HEALTH & BEAUTY

The last two editorials I wrote focused on delightful bits of food, first in East Hampton and then in Wainscott. This editorial is about Sag Harbor. Please keep in mind that I am giving away sacred family secrets taught to me through my wholesome experience, and this information should be used thoughtfully, not taken for granted. During the holidays some of us eat quite a bit, yet well, as we once did comfortably as a babe at our mother's breast. I enjoyed a feast of fresh vegetables, cheese and seafood the night before Christmas, and some of my mother and stepmother's homemade cookies

Hidden Treasures

Christmas day. Susyn made chocolate chip cookies from the Toll House recipe and mom Pam made madeleines (shell shaped flour cookies) and gingerbread men, the same she has made since I was a child.

All of these homemade Christmas cookies got me thinking about these round morsels, especially those I had seen in Sag Harbor, shopping on Sunday. Last week in the East Hampton Star, David Rattray wrote about Kathleen King, the founder of Kathleen's cookies, now Tate's. She said that growing up she could remember being fond of Famous Amos' cookies, and I remember these as well. They were the best ones Dad would bring home, and I remember my disappointment when I rediscovered his cookies later in a commercialized package. Amos had sold out and his cookies tasted like Chips Ahoy. So along came Kathleen at age twenty who just continued her family's business of running a farm and a bakery. It is good that she has not sold out, but I do think her cookies are buttered up, and too crisp, not moist at all. I bought them - Tate's, that is - at the Milk Pail, on the highway in Watermill. In Sag Harbor, Kathleen's cookies (the old corporate cookie she no longer owns) are sold at the IGA and they have a variety with different nuts. They look like the original Kathleen's and I like those, yet, like my family, I will probably stay loyal to Tate's because it is simply a nice story. Walking out I thought of Kathleen as I passed one of those rectangular boxes of Famous Amos.

Provisions, across the street, has a larger, fatter chocolate chip cookie made with less sugar than your average one and Sylvester and Company, in the opposite direction of Provisions but on the same side of the street, sells a lighter packaged bunch of cookies, like Kathleen's. Kathleen's cookies are now baked in Virginia, Tate's are baked in Southampton (by Kathleen) and Sylvester's are made by Bake Hampton in East Hampton. Provisions cooks and bakes on the premises and they also have linzer torts, oatmeal raisin cookies, corn bread and bran and spelt muffins. There are quaint wooden tables to sit down and enjoy a light snack as well. Sylvester and Co. specializes in coffee and pies, and cookies brought up from Bake Hampton. Coffee, with a small treat, makes for a light breakfast on weekends or any bright morning. For heavier fare and restaurants I left out, see the other sections of this newspaper.

POLICE BLOTTER

In Hampton Bays, a motorist from South Bend, Indiana was arrested for: speeding (in a school zone), failure to wear a seat belt, driving an uninsured vehicle, driving with impaired visibility (a cracked windshield), consuming alcoholic beverages in a car, criminal possession of a controlled substance (cocaine), and endangering the welfare of a child, as the fourteen year old passenger with him was not wearing a seat belt.

In an apparent music bias crime, three East Hampton High School students destroyed four musical instruments, a bass violin and three cellos at the East Hampton middle school. The youths broke into the school during the holiday recess. They also vandlaized a fish tank, throwing garbage and model toy cars into it. The fish were not harmed. The youths were arrested on January 3.

A 74 year old Springs resident was apprehended after she shoplifted a copy of Newsweek and a pair of scissors.

She told police that she had just purchased $100 worth of prescriptions and had not tried to hide the magazine and scissors. Was she infering she simply forgot to pay for them? Perhaps she might have wanted to clip coupons.

An industrious thief managed to get $500 in cash from East Hampton's Getty station's safe. There was no way the thief could have carried the safe off, as it is securely bolted to the floor. The police found that a power grinder had been applied to the safe and indeed a hole had been drilled into it, which had caused some degree of sparking, as it was discovered that some papers in the safe had been charred. After all this incendiary effort the thief exited through a window he (or, to be politically correct, she) had smashed to gain entry.

An outdoor shower was attacked in Montauk and resulted in $300 worth of damage.

This place is just too damned quiet. Police discovered a drunken motorist when it was noted that an '87 Honda was parked by the gas pumps of Sam's Auto on Three Mile Harbor. The station was closed at the time. A police car approached, the motorist took flight, the police took pursuit and pulled the car over on Abraham's Path. The driver failed a sobriety test.

Two wrongs don't make a right. East Hampton Village Police responded to a call from the East Hampton Cinema because a man was shouting obscenities at a woman who had sat in the handicapped section.

Is that your air freshener or the sweet smell of...? When officers stopped a motorist from Montauk on 114 in East Hampton, because his license plates were bent and unreadable, they discovered the aroma of cannibis coming from the car. To confirm the obvious, the driver took from his pants pocket a plastic packet containing marijuana.. Not surprisingly, he now has a court date.

Dan's LETTERS

THE GRINCHES OF MONTAUK

Dear Dan,

This Christmas eve I received a phone call from the same parents that I had delivered wood to out in Montauk on Thanksgiving Day. They had run out of firewood, which heats their home. They asked me if I could bring some firewood and show up as "Frosty" to give Christmas presents to, and help cheer up their twenty-four year old mentally handicapped son who had become despondent ever since his bicycle riding privileges had been revoked by the board of directors of the condo his parents rent.

Three years ago, the board of directors graciously voted to erect a sign cautioning that a "Deaf Child" was in the area, both allowing and protecting this mentally handicapped twenty-one year old man-child as he rode his bicycle on the condo's property.

Three days before Christmas, the parents of this mentally handicapped boy received a notice from the condo's board of directors indicating that their son could no longer ride his bicycle on condo property for his own safety.

For the past three years this disabled young man had bicycled on the condo's property without having or causing any accidents. He has never done anything to disturb the peace and tranquility of the condo's environment, since he can neither speak nor hear. Although he is twenty-four years old, he has the mental capacity and innocence of a seven-year-old child or second grader.

For the first time, as a disabled veteran, I feel ashamed that I put my life on the line in the jungles of Vietnam for my country. It's not that I don't love my country. It's just that I don't love certain people who have the nerve to call themselves Americans, and act towards a poor, simple, physically and mentally handicapped young man as if he had no feelings whatsoever. This young man can't even speak up and defend himself. He needs people like you and me to help stand up and fight for him!

SUPPORT LIGHT POLLUTION BILL

Dear Dan,

I had e-mailed you a response to your written piece on the death of your friend, and the Main Street lights.

Enclosed please find a summary of a New York State Law which has just been introduced by a Long Island Senator, Marcellino, which, if passed and adhered to will prevent another avoidable death due to glare from unshielded bulbs.

Over the last several months, members of a group of people who are advocating the passage of the New York law, (See: <http://www.ggw.org/selene>) have tried to get our own Senator, LaValle, to go on the record as a supporter of a Light Pollution Bill, and have been unsuccessful. I am going to send him your article and a copy of the Bill. Would you give him a call and see if you can obtain an answer to the question: "Will he vote to pass a Light Pollution Law in New York State?"

I think it will be impossible for him to ignore a call from you.

Please let me know if this is something that you will do.

ANXIETY PROVOKING MOMENTS

Dear Dan,

I just finished reading another of your beautiful articles, "Evening Out," and I identify very well with your description and evaluation of the traffic situation/problem on Main Street. I have experienced enough anxiety-provoking moments trying to cross there throughout the year. I thought your suggestions were very insightful and constructive. The only problem is that there was too much common sense put forth in them.

to provide your crops with all the nutrients and water they need!

If you use our 50/50 soil and compost recipe, this should provide a steady supply of most of the essential nutrients as long as you avoid overwatering. Heavy watering can leach out nitrogen (N) and potassium (K), the two most soluble plant nutrients.

But to be sure that your containerized plants get enough nitrogen (N) (especially important if you're growing N-hungry crops corn or lettuce. We suggest adding 2 to 4-pounds of fish meal to each cubic yard of soil! compost mix. Mix half in before planting, and apply the other half to the soil surface about 6-weeks after planting.

In addition, add about two-thirds of a pound of Sulpo-mag to every cubic yard of soil/compost mix. The Sol-po-mag supplies sulfur, potassium and magnesium. The other key nutrient sometimes leached from container mixes is calcium (Ca). You can counter this loss by mixing one pound of gypsum into each cubic yard of mix.

How big is a cubic yard you ask? Well, it equals 200-gallons of soil. Here's how our fertilizer recommendations convert per 5-gallons of mix: 1 to 2 tablespoons of fish meal; 1/2 tablespoon Sul-po-mag or 1/6 tablespoon sulfate of potash; and 3/4 tablespoon gypsum. Mix the powders thoroughly into the soil/compost mix before you plant.

Moisture levels in containers can fluctuate much more than in garden soils. Early in the season, container soils tend to hold more water than the small young plants in them can use, and so the soil may not dry out enough, especially during cool, cloudy periods. To prevent this, always water sparingly at this time, or grow your tomatoes and other seedlings in small to medium sized containers for a few weeks and then transplant them to big tubs after they have developed a larger root system.

By the end of the summer you'll probably need to water at least once or twice a day, depending on how large your containers are and how many plants you put in them. Remember that container plants can't grow deeper roots to reach down for the moisture they need, they are totally dependant on you for their daily watering.
